SELECT MISCELLANY.

ROLIN ABERLY;
OR,
THE FATHER'S CURSE.

A TALE OF VIRGINIA BEFORE THE WAR.

BY LANCELOT [illegible]RENTY.

CHAPTER I.

Let political [illegible] may what they will, [illegible] has her noble [illegible] patriotism, the purple robe of royalty, while her, with nobility stamped upon every feature of his soul, is often crushed down by the iron hand of sordid, narrow-minded oppression. The world's aristocracy is not one of mental predominance;—that principle of the mind which invests its possessor with imaginary consequence because of birth or fortune, is anything in its character but lofty or ennobling; its essence is imbecility of intellect, and its development the sickly offspring of a hopelessly diseased parent. But to our simple story.

Rolin Aberly had, in his mental constitution, the elements of unhappiness. Sensitive and shrinking to a fault, he nevertheless had the nerve, when roused, to brave even death with a smile; but as a natural consequence of such a constructed mind, reaction was always fearfully paralizing. Added to this he was poor, and of course new little of this charitable world's impartial sympathy. Yet, mantle of clay never encased a finer spirit, for his mind was one of bold and strong conceptions, and refined in its character to the most delicate tone of sensibility.

I first met him in his eighteenth year at college, where he had been sent by his father, a poor but industrious tradesman; who being a man of cultivated and intelligent mind, and perceiving the passionate devotion of his son to literary pursuits, reduced as far as possible the wants of his family, in order to give him all the fortune he could ever bestow, a good education. To acquire this Rolin bent all his strong energies, and soon stood at the head of his class; but as he made no display in dress or money, and never joined the students in their diversions, or associated at all with any but myself, he soon became obnoxious to most in the university, and frequently experienced a direct manifestation of the ill-feelings entertained for him. A trivial insult he never noticed, or at least he never mentioned, but his proud spirit, when chafed beyond endurance, would brook no invasion of direct, immediate satisfaction. Whenever he could exercise a favor or do a kindness to any, his attentions were over of the most bland and delicate character; but farther he would not cultivate an intimacy, and never was known to solicit, or receive a proffered favor from any during his whole term at college.

I often remonstrated with him upon the folly of his constant seclusion from society, but his invariable answer was.

"They who mutually despise each other can have no genuine fellowship."

"But," said I, one day, "this is all a silly prejudice, a chimera of your own imagination. You cause yourself to be looked upon with suspicion, simply from the reason that you seem to regard all about you with the same feeling. Cast aside every false impression which circumstance has conjured up in your mind, and take by the hand your neighbor in open-hearted kindness and good feeling, and you will soon learn that friendship is not a plant of such hothouse production as you imagine."

He smiled bitterly as he replied. "Can I forget that my lot is cast with the despised children of poverty? and can I look the concealed sneer of the domineering and heartless? Not—no! Before I would stoop to an association with such as calculate worth by dollars, and merit by equipage, I would waste my inglorious life in the cell of an anchorite."

His eye flashed, and his usually pale cheek burned with suppressed indignation, while his low, deep, almost husky tones uttered the sentiments just noted.

The circumstance may be thought a trivial one to call out any manifestation of strong feeling, but in early years the mind suffers as intensely when acted upon by a painfully exciting cause, as it does in after life by influences which would seem withering beyond comparison, with the mental afflictions of youth. Time adds strength to our capacity for endurance.

One day a young man, haughty beyond forbearance, yet with no moral worth wantonly committed an outrage upon the feelings of Rolin, whom he thought, from his uniform quiet, retiring manners, and particularly because he was poor, possessed no independence of feeling. But he was mistaken once in his life. All the natural energy which possessed his proud spirit was aroused like a sleeping lion. He drew up to the domineering tyrant with a stern, iron countenance, and an unquailing eye, and demanded, in tones not to be misinterpreted, an immediate acknowledgment.

"You have two minutes left," said he, as a crowd of students gathered around to witness the rare sport. A curl of defiance hung upon the lips of his adversary, but his eye could not rest a moment on that of the incensed Rolin, who waited with folded arms and erect form the required concession.

The cowardly wretch who had provoked my friend's just indignation, and who was by far the most powerful of the two, perceiving that he was about asserting his right to require submission, slowly drew a long knife, and lifted it in a threatening attitude; the moment the glittering weapon met the eye of Rolin, one hand grasped the paltry villain's throat, and the other wrenched the knife from his hold. A well aimed blow dashed him to the ground, and Rolin left him almost insensible, to reflect when reflection came, upon the folly of trespassing where indignation might be roused to an assertion of right.

I followed him very soon to his room where he had retired. He was reclining upon the bed in a state of almost total exhaustion—his eyes restlessly wandering, and his countenance pale and languid in fine and expression.

"You have taught the puppy a lesson which he will not soon forget," said I as I seated myself on the bed by his side.

"I have made a fool of myself," was the answer.

"You have acted as you should have done."

"No, L., such a contention with such a paltry overbearing coxcomb is one which can find no justification. Though I could trample upon the wretch, yet I feel debased in having even spurned him for me."

Rolin soon after left college with honorary directions such as a few obtain. It was several years before we again met.

CHAPTER II.

"Anne, if I mistake not, our heart strings thrill to the same touch, and their music blends in the same strain of harmony."

The lovely girl who hung upon the arm of Rolin, lifted not from the earth her dark blue eyes, that sparkled with bewildering, trembling joy, for she understood the delicate allusion of her lover, and silently responded to it with a glad heart.

"Anne, the brightness is fading away from the sun—set clouds,—a dim, mysterious twilight is gathering like the shadow of death over and around us,—the stars are coming forth from their hiding places in the far-off depths of heaven, and are looking down like patient watches, cheering with their smiles the darkness falling heavily and pressing like a weight upon the wearied breast of the dusky mantle of eternity is gathering its dark folds around me, will you, like a cheering star, hang upon a horizon of my being?"

The tender cadences of his voice fell like passion's strongest appeal upon her heart, and its inward response was wild and free as are ever young gushing impulses. Her arm clung more firmly to his, and though her tongue tried not an utterance of the strong affection of her heart, yet that one silent act of confidence was an answer more fully expressive of all she felt than ever words could utter.

After Rolin Aberly left college he made an application for the situation of private tutor, in the family of a rich Virginia planter, who possessed all the haughty pride which could characterize one esteeming himself for his wealth alone. His offer was accepted, and two sons and a beautiful daughter, just sixteen, were placed under his charge. The progress of his pupils was such as to give entire satisfaction to the father, and Rolin remained in the family for nearly two years.

Anne Wilmer was a delicate, fair creature; born to captivate, and living but to chain affection wherever her influence acted to. To a mind like that which Rolin Aberly possessed, it was impossible to come in contact with and love one like Anne; and a year had scarcely passed ere the young tutor was wound round by a web of feeling which no hand could unravel.—

"True love hath worldless language all its own

and it was not long before the only one in existence whom he wished to know his affection, penetrated the mystery, and her downcast eye and reddening cheek often responded to the involuntary imtone which fell from his lips.

Time passed on, but Rolin made no declaration of his deep idolatry of feeling. Anne's seventeenth year was drawing to a close, and many suitors were already centring their attentions at her father's house; but she encouraged none. Though Aberly had given her no attentional manifestation of affection, yet she loved him and knew that his heart offered a full return.

Her father never imagined for a moment that the dependent on his bounty, as he thought him, would ever aspire to touch the hand of his patron's daughter. But, though Rolin was poor, he esteemed himself second to no human being, and notwithstanding he dared not hope for a commotion so ardently desired as that of calling Anne his own, yet he hesitated not to think that he had an equal right with any to sue for, and if possible win, her affections. A thought like a betrayal of confidence crossed his mind, but his proud spirit spurned an idea, that would place him below any who wore the garb of manhood.

Frequently an evening walk was proposed by sometimes one and sometimes the other of the parties, and it was an occasion of this kind which afforded, at length, an opportunity for Rolin to make the declaration with which this chapter opens.

They walked on, each wraped up in an intensity of feeling, which silence made only more burdensome.

"Anne," at length asked Rolin, "will you be mine?"

Such a question at once roused her to a stern sense of the utter impossibility of ever gaining her father's consent to such a union, and her own abiding reluctance to disobey parental authority, which had ever been of the most tender and affectionate character.

She paused so long for an answer, that the impatient spirit of Aberly chafed within him, and he soon repeated the question in a tone so equivocal to Anne's ear, that she immediately responded,—

"If my father's consent can be gained."

"If it is not gained, what will you say?"

She lifted up her slender form to an almost supernatural height, stepped back from the side of her lover and looked him for an instant strangely in the face, while her own changed every moment with the wild thoughts which were agitating her mind, until resolution became fixed and she said,

"Rolin Aberly—my father's consent must be gained, or happiness can never be mine."

"That consent shall never be yielded," said the old man, striding up and grasping his affrighted daughter's arm. "What a beggarly adventurer, fed by my bounty, suing for her hand, and she granting it? Madness! I would sooner see the death-agony writhing her frame than consent to such a consummation!"

Then turning to Aberly, he uttered this malediction,

"May the curse of Heaven follow your footsteps, and your head never be pillowed a moment in quiet repose! Cross not my threshold again," continued he, violently, "or the vengeance that is wakening even now in my bosom shall find its victim."

Hurrying his daughter away he left Rolin, overcome by astonishment and indignation, fixed to the spot where he had first been standing.

Wilmer had felt suspicion creeping over his mind for some time, and on this evening had determined to ascertain if it were just or groundless. How well he succeeded is evident.

Rolin Aberly was not such a novice in mental philosophy as to be ignorant of the fact that opposition would but strengthen Anne's affection. And though he found himself cut off from her society, and his worldly respects blasted, yet he determined still to prosecute his suit so soon as an opportunity offered. He soon found a pleasant situation in Wilmer's immediate neighborhood, and one which yielded him more pecuni

The Beaver Argus.

J. WEYAND, ... EDITOR.

Beaver, Pa., April 2, 1873.

THE result in the State on Local option will hardly fall below 40,000 majority in favor of license. The cities and eastern counties generally voted for license, while in the western portion of the State the vote was pretty strongly in favor of doing without stimulants.

THE extra session of the United States Senate adjourned on last Wednesday evening. Thanks were voted to Vice President Wilson "for the ability, courtesy and impartiality with which he presided over the deliberations of this body," after which the senators, some of them homeward bound and some of them on pleasure bent, left Washington.

DISGUSTED with the result of the long Caldwell debate, The Philadelphia Bulletin says: "we are not hopeful of any good results from this matter. A Senate which could forgive Patterson and Pomeroy, and for several weeks discuss such a case as that of Caldwell, will not be feared by any other man who proposes to buy his election to a seat in the body."

THE new county bill (Peter Herdic's Minnequa) went through the House at Harrisburg, last week. The vote in that branch of the Legislature stood 48 for Minnequa, and 42 against. Mr. Cross, we are glad to see voted against the "iniquity." The Senate will surely not vote in favor of the new county, inasmuch as it is hardly denied, but that it is one of the most corrupt schemes ever brought to Harrisburg for Legislative action.

SENATOR Caldwell, of Kansas, seeing that his expulsion from the United States Senate was inevitable, resigned last week before a vote was reached in his case. It is now understood that both Caldwell and Pomeroy will be candidates before the Kansas Legislature next winter for the seat made vacant by Caldwell's resignation. It is hardly possible though, that even Kansas will degrade herself further by sending either of these noted corruptionists back to Washington.

THE Republicans of Trumbull county, Ohio, in their county convention held at Warren last week, passed a resolution requesting Gen. John A. Garfield to resign his seat in Congress. Trumbull county forms a portion of Garfield's district. Gen. Garfield was badly mixed up with the Credit Mobilier business, and to make matters still worse, he voted for the retroactive salary bill. Mr. Garfield will hardly pay any attention to this resolution, but the fact that his constituents adopted it shows an improved political sentiment.

WHAT is about to come now? We see it stated in a telegram from Paris, that the final decision in the Trans-Continental Railway case, in which General Fremont of the United States was a principal defendant, and who was charged with the issue of fraudulent bonds of the El Paso [illegible] General Fremont was sentenced to five years imprisonment and to pay a fine of 3,000 francs. As the General was not in France when he was tried, and, in fact not out of his own country at the time, we are a little anxious to know how the decree of the court is to be enforced. It is one thing to try, convict and sentence a man, but quite another thing to get hold of him, so that the sentence may be executed.

HON. A. B. BRADFORD, of Darlington township, this county, delivered a lecture a few evenings ago to a Pittsburgh audience on Darwinism. He believes in Darwin's theory of the origin of man, and we presume he has given the subject no little attention.

Dr. D. L. Dempsey, of Beaver, has likewise been delivering a lecture on the same subject recently, on the other side of the question, however. He, too, has doubtless investigated the subject pretty thoroughly, for we hear his lecture alluded to in complimentary terms. Now, as these gentlemen are both able and distinguished, and as their objective point is the enlightenment of their fellow citizens, we suggest the propriety of them meeting in Beaver, at some time in the near future, and entering upon a public discussion of the question. That such a discussion would be interesting and instructive, we have no doubt, and we apprehend a room in which the debate could be held would be easily obtained.

THE question of Local Option, which has just been voted upon by the people of Pennsylvania, bids fair to come before them again in a different form. The vote on Friday March 21st was cast under a law passed by the present Legislature, allowing each ward and township to decide whether it would have license or prohibition during the next three years. The preponderance was largely in favor of license. On the same day an amendment was adopted in the Constitutional Convention, prohibiting the sale of "intoxicating liquors, or mixtures thereof containing the same, for use as a beverage," and directing the Legislature, within one year from the adoption of the Constitution, to enact laws with adequate penalties for the enforcement of this provision. This section will be submitted to a separate vote of the people of the whole State. It will be free from the doubt of constitutionality which was raised against Local Option, and, it is thought, will receive a fuller vote than previous measures of the kind.

THE Anti-Chinese agitators at Beaver Falls are in a pitiable condition. They at first thought they were of sufficient importance to oblige Congress to pass a law "protecting" them from Coolie labor. Their petition asking for the passage of such an act was read in the House of Representatives and that was the last of it. Next they dropped back to Harrisburg and wanted the great State of Pennsylvania, through its Legislature, to instruct our Senators and Representatives in Congress to support a measure prohibiting the introduction of Chinese laborers.

Mr. Rutan offered the resolution, and it was foolishly permitted to pass through the Senate, but when it went to the House, it was placed in the hands of a committee, and after an investigation of its merits, the committee reported unfavorably.

That we take it is the last attempt that will be made to secure legislation on that subject. The Chinese question was a remarkably hobby for a little while. Little, brainless demagogues rode it briskly for a few weeks, but the "sands of its life" are now gone out and in a short time there will be none left to acknowledge that they once straddled the poor thing. "Sich is life."

MR. FREDERICK DOUGLASS, in a recent lecture in Philadelphia, described his own escape out of Slavery. He said that he had tried ineffectually once to escape from his master's plantation, 60 miles south of Baltimore; and, failing, had been sent to Baltimore to his master's brother, who hired him out as a ship-carpenter. Becoming familiar in the ship-yard with sailors, their ways, talk, and phrases, he borrowed a suit of sailor's clothes and a seaman's protection from a colored man of his own personal appearance, and, in this disguise, jumped on the railroad cars just as they started for Philadelphia, without buying a ticket at the office, as at the latter he would have been subject to a rigid examination. Arriving in Philadelphia, he passed on to New-York. Subsequently some $700 in money was collected in England and sent hither to purchase his freedom, which was negotiated by the Hon. William H. Meredith of Philadelphia, and now President of the State Constitutional Convention. He said that he had kept the secret hitherto because he did not want to expose to trouble the friends who had aided him.

SAYS the Philadelphia Star: "If public sentiment, as generally expressed, is not deceptive, the days of political rings are being rapidly numbered, and their complete overthrow a question of time. Of this fact none are more fully aware than the ring leaders themselves. Conscious of an approaching storm, they are determined to make hay while the sun shines, and hence we find legislation assuming a character against which there is a general revolt on the part of the people, but which they are powerless to check save by a resort to force. Already it is proposed to suspend the Board of Health; to restore the old system of cleaning the streets; the District Attorney is seeking to make a place for a friend as a murder detective; the rights of the Market street railroad have been usurped, and a host of other measures, all calculated to put money in the pockets of the ring, have either been consummated or will be before the session closes. There is no alternative for these ills but to grin and bear them, waiting for the "good time coming" so long promised, and which in the ordinary course of events must soon arrive.

THE fact that shystering lawyers have been enabled to keep in force in Pennsylvania an infamously unjust libel law occasions frequent pungent paragraphs from the [illegible] observation is this from the Boston Post:

The Pennsylvania Legislature will soon have before it a bill which proposes to remove many of the restrictions imposed upon the press of that State in regard to libel. It departs from that old barbarism of civil law that "the greater the truth the greater is the libel," and provides instead that in prosecutions for libel the truth may be given in evidence and the facts explained. The burden of proof as to malicious intent lies also with the complainant. This if it becomes a law, as there is some prospect that it will, insures the press protection in the independent treatment of public questions that it has not enjoyed in the past. The arrest and punishment of the city editor of the Philadelphia Press may have been the one legalized outrage which gave this remedial proposition its birth. At all events that transaction showed the public how arbitrary and discriminating the law could be in such matters to enforce a penalty where malicious intent was positively disproved and a full correction had been made. With corruption springing up like rank weeds all over the State the press has been virtually gagged by the insidious dangers that statements of the truth would incur. Whether success or failure awaits the bill the fact that it is to be offered for consideration denotes an awakening, and a degree of civilization may be established in Pennsylvania before 1876 that will enable Mr. Charles A. Dana to tell the truth from the steps of Independence Hall.

THE anti-Chinese people held a meeting in Fallston on last Friday evening. The attendance was quite limited and the names of the persons who figured in the meeting, with one or two exceptions, are strangers to us, and entirely "unknown to fame." Among other resolutions adopted at the meeting was the following:

Resolved, That both consistency and principle demand of all persons who are opposed to Chinese Coolie labor in this county to withhold their influence and support from any tradesman, merchant, business man, manufacturer, farmer, mechanic, laboring man, newspaper, those seeking political preferment, or any other class of citizens who advocate the employment, importation or retention of Chinese operatives in our midst, and that, we as a league, and as individuals, so pledge ourselves.

It affords us pleasure to be able to state that the sun arose as usual the next morning after the Fallston meeting, the moon kept right on in its accustomed orbit, the Ohio river meandered along as usual, the steamboats and locomotives bellowed and shrieked as in days gone by, the roosters crowed jocundly as ever, the dogs barked no less viciously than before, the women scolded as snappishly as they ever did in their lives, and if there was any difference in the price of candy, or the squall of babies, we neither noticed it at the time, nor has the fact been reported up to this date (Tuesday 1 p. m.) at our office. If the anticipated "wreck of matter and crush of worlds," which the above resolution is clearly intended to bring about, comes along before our next issue, we will do our best to get out an extra and inform our patrons of the exact extent of the great smash up. Curtis and Chris. Molter—particularly Chris.—when everything goes to pot and the whole globe is enveloped in blue ruin, where will we find you? That's what we want to know now. For the present, with fear and trembling, we bid all of our friends and acquaintances good by.

HERE AND THERE.

—A young man in Bean Hill, Conn., was wanted as a witness in a liquor case. He saw the constable coming for him, rushed into a tannery, and hid himself in the sweating-room, where the hair is loosened from the skins by steam. The engineer innocently let on this steam, and the consequence is that the unwilling witness is now as bald as old Elisha.

—The following story is told of Rev. Mr. Hammond, who approached a man at Burlington, Iowa, the other day, asking him if he was a Christian. "No," replied the other party, "I am a railroad man." "Well," said Mr. Hammond, "I know of several conductors in New England that are Christians." "That may work down east all right, but a man can't be both in Iowa," responded the employee.

—A young lady in Harrisburg, the other day, having sharpened a pencil to a long, fine point, placed it in her mouth, with the point inside, and then practiced on the piano. While subsequently in the act of closing the piano, the lid struck the end of the pencil, driving the point deep into the roof of the mouth, breaking it off and leaving it and a portion of the wood of the pencil in the mouth. A physician experienced great difficulty in extracting it.

—Richard Cardwell, age 18 years, was thrown from a buggy in Rondout, some days ago, and his leg broken. Other young men have suffered in a similar way before, but the painful peculiarity of Mr. Cardwell's case is that Richard, although so young, has had his different limbs broken fifteen times. The local newspapers attributes this to the fact that "the ossification of his cartilaginous structure is of slow development." That must be it, we suppose.

—A Staten Island young man was so worked up, when he called to take his girl to prayer meeting the other night, to find that another fellow had played the bird trick on him, that he followed the couple and hung around the sanctuary till the meeting was over, and when they came out, drew his revolver and banged away at the "other fellow" until the pistol ran down. He hit everything except what he fired at, and, before he could wind up his weapon, he was in jail.

—Shall we have a new system of medicine, to be called the Scare-Cure? A lady in New Haven has for three months suffered severe illness and almost total deprivation of speech, from a bronchial affection. She has recovered her voice, in a singular manner. While in the attic of her house she was surprised by the noiseless and unexpected approach of one of the family. In her fright she suddenly cried out, and since then her articulation has been very clear and distinct. We are not told whether she is married, or, if so, how her husband likes the change.

—Another used-up English prize fighter has experienced religion and been converted to total abstinence—the great Bendigo of Nottingham, the record of whose many achievements in Bell's Life. Mr. Bendigo now preaches, and in one of his recent discourses said to some of his old associates: "Well, my friends, I am still going on in the new road, and I like it very well. I shan't come among you again, I think. I have been away from God a great while, just like that cove, the prodigal son, did from his father; but he's taken to me again. I'm respectable now, and in good company, and God takes care of me. I have been fighting for the devil for thirty-four years, but I am now going to tight on the other side until I die; and I mean to go to Heaven, and I hope I shall see you, one and all, in the happy land."

—At a very successful seance in Cincinnati the other night, a man burst into tears when the medium described very accurately a tall, blue eyed spirit standing by him, with light side-whiskers and his hair parted in the middle.

"Do you know him?" inquired a man at his side, in a sympathetic whisper.

"Know him? I guess I do," replied the unhappy man, wiping his eyes. "He was engaged to my wife. If he hadn't died he would have been her husband instead of me. O, George, George!" he murmured, in a voice choked with emotion, "why did you peg out?"

—It may be boldly stated that even a doctor of medicine may be a fool. In an Indiana county a physician sued on a bill for professional services. The defendant claimed set off against the Doctor's bill, alleging that his wife had at various times told the fortunes of the several members of the Doctor's family, and that she had never been paid for such service. The Doctor admitted the fortune-telling, but claimed that he had been misled by it. His daughter, he said, relying upon the prophecies of the defendant, believed that she would on a certain day be called upon to marry. A wedding outfit was at great expense obtained; the day came, but no husband came with it, though everything was in readiness for the marriage. The Doctor got judgment for $5.

—During the recent bribery debate in the Senate some of the Senators met with some very severe rebukes from their fellow-members. One in particular [Mr. Cameron] was considerably stirred up by the remarks of Mr. Hamilton, of Maryland. This gentleman thought proper to recall to the mind of our senior Senator the transactions and scenes that made the Pennsylvania Legislature of 1863 notorious. Hamilton charged upon Cameron that he attempted to buy the Democratic members of the Legislature at that time to make himself Senator, and that he was only prevented from doing so by the Democrats threatening that any man who sold out to Cameron would be shot. Hamilton further stated that the Democratic members voted with pistols at their heads. Hamilton went unanswered. The general impression about the capitol was that Cameron thought discretion the better part of valor, and that he chose the course of remaining quiet, fearing that if he replied some other Senators who knew more about the affair than Hamilton would have something to say.

A DISGRACED JUDGE.

Charles P. Sherman at Home—Broken Down by His Disgrace.

[World Cor.]

CLEVELAND, March 21.—With the utter discomfiture of Judge Charles T. Sherman before the Judiciary Committee at Washington last month, whither he had been summoned to explain his conduct in claiming a fee of $10,000 for pretended services rendered to the New York Stock Exchange in securing the repeal of the brokers' tax, your readers are familiar. The letters of Judge Sherman to Le Grand Lockwood, jr., claiming the above fee and threatening unpleasant results if his demands were not complied with, were put in evidence, and for a whole afternoon the guilty Judge, utterly at sea and confused by the hopelessness of his case, gave such a record of testimony as fairly disgusts the reader. The official report of the testimony has been published here to-night, and the feeling against Judge Sherman is bitter. The official report is so much more damaging than the worst accounts of it published hitherto, that it has all the interest of a new case. As a single example of Judge Sherman's testimony, which has not hitherto appeared in print, take the following:

Q. You ask that this money should be placed to your credit personally; why, if the money was to go to Judge Bartley and Mr. Parsons, or anybody else, did you want it to go to you? A. I felt that I was morally responsible for their compensation; I stated to them that I would see that they received a proper fee.

By Mr. Maynard—Were they aware that you were engaged in obtaining the compensation for them? A. I do not know that they were aware that I was making efforts to compensate them; I had informed, as I have stated, that I would procure for them a handsome fee.

By the Chairman—Between last June and this date have you had any communication with them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. By letter? A. I wrote to Judge Bartley that I was trying to procure his fee.

Q. When was that? A. I cannot give you the date. It was probably in September or October.

Q. Have you applied to him for that letter? A. No, sir; I have seen him personally since that time; he is my brother-in-law; he has been in Ohio, and we have visited backwards and forwards; I will not say positively whether the communication to which I refer was by letter or whether it was verbal.

Q. Have you also seen Mr. Parson? A. With Mr. Parsons I have not exchanged a word since.

Q. It was through Mr. Parsons that you supposed this legislation was accomplished; have you communicated with him since last June? A. No, sir, I have not; he was engaged last fall in a very exciting political canvass, and I have seen nothing of him.

Q. You reside in Cleveland, Q.? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Since you found trouble in enforcing this claim against the Stock Exchange have you communicated that fact to him? A. No, sir; he was in Washington from the 1st of November until a very few days before I left Cleveland, and I have not seen him so as to communicate with him on the subject.

Q. Not since you wrote the letter which is in evidence in June last. A. No, sir.

A week ago Judge Sherman returned home from Washington; broken in body, abject and miserable—an object of pity even to his enemies. The bar of Northern Ohio, which was insulted in the first instance by his appointment, is determined to force him to abandon the bench. There is not a lawyer in Cleveland who will consent to even plead a case before him again. If he resigns [illegible] will serve to shield him from any further open attack; if not, formal measures will be taken to secure his impeachment.

"How Are the Mighty Fallen."

[From the Kansas City News.]

To-day there is a man going about the streets of this city, ragged, dirty and penniless, subsisting on free lunches, and the charities of gamblers, and has not slept in a bed for months, who during the war, was one of the most dashing cavalry officers in the Union army, and was promoted from the rank of First Lieutenant to full Brigadier and Brevet Major General, for brilliant exploits, on the field of battle, and who for a long time had a large and important command. He had been here for two or three months, under an assumed name, being ashamed to dim the brilliancy of his record in the service of his country by an exhibition of his degradation under his former honored name. He is generally very reticent, having little to do with any one or talking but little, save when "engineering" for a drink, at which he is remarkably successful. Night before last, while lying helplessly drunk in the rear part of a Third street saloon, some men thought to play a joke on him by stealing his shirt, and proceeded to strip him. Underneath his shirt, and suspended by a string around his neck, was a small canvas bag, which the men opened and found it to contain his commission as Brevet Major General, two congratulatory letters, one from Grant and one from President Lincoln, a photograph of a little girl and a curl of hair—a "chestnut shadow" that doubtless one day crept over the brow of some loved one. When these things were discovered, even the half-drunken men who found them felt a respect for the man's former greatness, and pity for his fallen condition, and quietly returned the bag and contents to where they found them, and replaced the sleeper's clothes upon him. Yesterday a News reporter tried to interview the man and endeavor to learn something of his life in the past few years, but he declined to communicate anything. He cried like a child when told how his right name and former position were ascertained, and with tears trickling down his cheeks said: "For God's sake don't publish my degradation, or my name at least, if you are determined to say something about it. It is enough that I know myself how low I have become. Will you promise that much? If will do no good, but will do my friends a great deal of harm, as, fortunately, they think I died in South America, where I went at the close of the war."

Intemperance and the gambling table, he said, had wrought his ruin.

A MISTAKE SOMEWHERE.

Sued for Breach of Promise by One He Does not Know.

Abraham Cohen, a journeyman tailor, aged 18, was arrested by Deputy Arrest Sheriff Judson Jarvis, yesterday, and sent to jail in default of $1,000 bail. Cohen is charged with breach of promise, the complainant being Miss Helena Moses, of 17 Division street. Miss Moses is about 22 years of age. She says she met the boy Abraham at a friend's house, and that after they had been acquainted one week and a half he proposed marriage and she consented. In honor of the anticipated happy event she expended $40 for an engagement party. She also spent $150 for a wedding outfit and edibles for the marriage supper, but the youth refused to be one at the wedding, wherefore she prays that he may be made to pay $10,000 to heal her blighted affections. She says, also, that Cohen is abundantly able to satisfy this pecuniary demand, and she is informed and believes that he meditates flight to avoid the penalty of his unmanly conduct.

Cohen tells a different story. He says he earns but a scanty living by application to his trade; has no other resources, and had never thought of fleeing the country to evade Miss Moses, because he never promised to marry her, never saw her until he was arrested, and never, before yesterday, knew that such a person as Helena Moses existed. Cohen is a mere boy, very plainly dressed, and not prepossessing in appearance. Miss Moses is a pretty woman, nearly attired of engaging manners.—N. Y. Sun.

THE EVANS STEAL.

Renewal of the Case—Points in the Writ of Error.

HARRISBURG, March 25.—Attorney-General Dimmick is preparing a writ of error in the case of the Commonwealth vs. George O. Evans, to be submitted to the Supreme Court at the session in that city in May next. The writ will be based upon the following points, which was submitted to Judge Pearson in the late trial, and upon which he was requested to charge the jury in the affirmative:

First—That it is the duty of an officer or agent of the Commonwealth, as soon as he collects moneys belonging to her, to pay the same to her, less his lawful charges, and if he fails so to do within a reasonable time, he is not entitled to any compensation for collecting the same.

Second—The undisputed evidence in this case establishes that the defendant collected the following moneys, at the following dates, belonging to the Commonwealth, viz: May 2, 1857, $78,516 89; October 27, 1868, $105,871 46, and August 26, 1870, $136,846 09; and only paid thereon to the Commonwealth, July 21, 1871, $29,967 53, the Commonwealth is entitled to a verdict for said three sums with interest less amount of said payment, and such compensation as the jury may allow for his services, if any, to be ascertained as hereinafter directed.

A Pension to the Pioneer Oil Producer.

The House, at Harrisburg, this morning, (March 26th) after a brief discussion, by a vote of 65 to 23, passed a bill granting annuity for the relief of Colonel E. L. Drake, the pioneer in the petroleum trade of the Allegheny Valley, whose great services are well known to every one acquainted with the early development of that important interest. Drake, in 1857, while living in New Haven first conceived the idea of boring into the ground for oil. At that time it was collected from the surface of the oil springs, and the production of the entire oil regions did not exceed a barrel a week. In 1858 he commenced work, and shortly afterwards invented the iron driving pipe, and mode of driving which is now in universal use in the oil regions. He took out no patent, and never realized anything by his invention. A recital of Colonel Drake's enthusiastic efforts to develop the oil production, would fill a volume. At first he was laughed at as a lunatic or a visionary speculator. When success crowned his labors, and the first oil well attested the correctness of his theories, it found him broken down in health, paralyzed, and without a cent; he lost his investments in oil lands, and the great crowd of speculators that now took hold of the business marched over poor Drake's blasted hopes, so far as personal advantage was concerned, to their varied fortunes of wealth and bankruptcy. Some years ago the oil producers raised two or three thousand dollars for Mr. Drake, but that is now exhausted and he is living in a state of extreme destitution at Bethlehem, dependent on the needle of his wife for the necessities of life. He is disabled by paralysis, the result of exposures in the oil regions during his early labors, from any manual labor or other occupation.

The provision named in the House bill is fifteen hundred dollars a year during the life of Mr. Drake or his wife. This is not a charity, but justice.

—John Devine, the murderer of August Kamp, was sentenced yesterday to be hanged at San Francisco May 9th. The prisoner desired to make a statement to the Court before sentence, but his counsel would not permit.

Beaver County Builders.—We see in one of our Ohio exchanges that Messrs. S. Harrold & Co., of Beaver Falls, have the contract for building the new Court House in Coshocton, Ohio. They are to erect the entire building and when finished, to supply it with heating apparatus, the whole of which is to cost the princely sum of $65,000. We congratulate our Beaver Falls neighbors on securing the job and hope they will realize a handsome profit from it.

New Goods, New Styles, and Great Bargains.—Mr. William Reich of Bridgewater has just received his spring and Summer stock of cloths cassimeres, vestings &c., &c., and feels assured that a better assortment can not be found in this country. A Reunion is contemplated at the Steubenville Female Seminary, some time in June, of all the graduates of that institution. We are informed that the institution has turned out about 1,500 graduates. A member of each class has been selected as historian. It is expected by this means to obtain a complete history of every graduate of the institution. Mrs. Julia Ray, of this place, has been appointed historian of the class of '29.—Wellsburg News.

Wooden Wedding.—I am happy to say that one of the grandest affairs of this kind occurred in the town of Rochester, on Monday, 24th inst., at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Line:

A large number of friends and acquaintances from Allegheny and Rochester were in attendance, to partake of one of the most sumptuous dinners that could be gotten up, and nothing was wanting that could add to the comforts of the inner-man; and upon the whole it was a most enjoyable event and a decided success. It is needless to say that many nice presents were the result of the occasion, and the guests will long remember the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Line. M.

Excitement at Drug Stores.—There has been a general rush the last month at the Beaver Drug Store of Hugo Andriessen, for Dr. A. Boschee's German Syrup.

It has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and for any person suffering with a severe cough, heavy cold settled on the breast, consumption or any disease of the throat and lungs it has no equal in the world. We Published, a week or two ago a paper, said to have been signed by 177 property holders, merchants, mechanics, &c., of Beaver Falls, stating that they, the signers, were satisfied with the reply of the Economy Society on the Chinese labor question, and that the agitation of that subject would now cease. Since that publication, the opponents of Chinese labor have been alleging that there is no such paper so signed in existence, and as proof of their assertion they claim that no such document has been seen, and cannot now be produced. In answer to this we have only to say that the paper is in Mr. Hice's hands, and can be seen by any one calling at his office in Beaver Falls. So much for that "croorback."

Advice Gratis.—A word or two to teamsters and owners of steeds may not be out of place just now: When you have occasion to stop your team while in town, make it a point to stop it right on the street crossing. This will afford you a fine opportunity of hearing pious people swear, and besides you will have the exquisite gratification of seeing them flounder in the mud and soiling their clothes in the effort to get around your vehicle.

If you happen to be in town on horseback, and want to transact some business or "see the sights" in the village, be sure to hitch your horse to the finest maple tree you can get your eyes on. He will "go for" that tree at once, and the way he will make the bark fly will cause you to laugh all over. In addition to the sport his operation yields you, you can indulge in the pleasant reflection that it will take a couple of dollars and a few years waiting for the owner of that tree to repair damages. This is sarkasm.

E. P. Kuhn, esq. has been quite unwell for the last two or three weeks, He is now, however, on the mend, and will probably be about as usual in a few days.

We would call the especial attention of our country merchants, shoe dealers, and readers to the advertisement of J. H. Borland, 53 and 55 Wood street, Pittsburgh, which appears in our paper. He is receiving the largest stock of boots, shoes, gaiters, balmorals, brogans, slippers, ever brought to the city. He manufactures women's, misses', and children's goods. Buying his stock for cash, he offers to duplicate any eastern bills. He has also opened up a Family Retail store, 98 Market. Give him a call when in the city, and examine his stock and prices.

For good buggies, wagons, carriages, spring wagons, sulkeys, buck-boards, &c., go to Ingraham Boyd's, near the depot, in Rochester. All orders promptly attended to. sept4;1y

A Crystal Wedding.—On Tuesday evening of last week, Mr. T. W. Devore and lady, (nee Miss McCreary,) of Beaver, celebrated the 15th anniversary of their marriage, by inviting a large number of their friends to meet with them at their residence on that evening. These friends, as a matter of course "came down" with the crystal, and the display on the occasion was sufficient to stock a first class retail store. A sumptuous repast was spread before the invited guests, and a good time generally was indulged in. Before the company separated, Rev. D. P. Lowary, who is "at home" on occasions of this character, requested the happy couple to "stand up," and, after getting the crowd about him, procee ded to link Mr. and Mrs. D. together anew. The ceremony was gone through with in a half serious and half comic manner, and a number of his sallies had the effect of "bringing down the house." After Mr. Lowary succeeded in making the couple one, Rev. Dr. Riggs, was called upon to lead in prayer, and in offering up his supplications invoked the Divine blessing upon Mr. and Mrs. Devore, thanked the Creator of all good for allowing those present to mingle together on so joyous an occasion, and trusted that the returning years would bring about no change of feeling on the part of those whose marriage anniversary was now being celebrated. The guests departed at a late hour, and all having full faith and confidence in crystal weddings.

It Runs like a Prairie Fire!—We will say of Dr. Walker's Vinegar Bitters that it runs like a prairie fire. The fame of the great Temperance tonic is, however, but poorly exemplified by that figure of speech; for a prairie fire runs only in one direction, whereas the reputation of the Bitters spreads toward all points of the compass with equal rapidity. We do not believe there is a square mile of inhabited territory in the civilized portion of the United States where this meritorious preparation is not appreciated. If any theoretical gentleman thinks he is prepared to show that there is "nothing in it," we advise him to go to the Prairie States, to the Mississippi Valley, to the deltas of the southern rivers, to New England, in fact, anywhere within the limits of "Uncle Sam's real estate," and ventilate his views. By so doing, he can raise a hearty laugh than has ever yet shaken the sides of an intelligent people, persons who have been cured can't help laughing at other people who tell them that the medicine which saved their lives is a failure.

A request having been made to the Elders and Trustees of the Reformed Presbyterian congregation of Fairview, for the use of the church for the purpose of holding a temperance meeting at a regular meeting of the congregation. This request was refused, eight members only being present, five voted against granting the church. Another meeting was called on the 24th of March, at which the following preamble and resolutions were passed:

WHEREAS, At a regular meeting of the R. P. congregation of Fairview, a vote was taken closing the doors of the church against all meetings except for religious purposes, and the preaching of the the gospel.

WHEREAS, Said vote was taken, not on the ground that the congregation was opposed to temperance, but for the purpose of excluding from the church other meetings not consistent with religion, and that said action was taken in a rash and hasty manner, unbecoming to a Christian congregation before considering that temperance is a part of religion; therefore

Resolved, That we, the Elders, Trustees and members of the congregation present, do re-consider and rescind the action of the former meeting, and hereafter open the doors of the church for all meetings for the good of the congregation, the church and the furtherance of the gospel.

The "Heathen Chinee."—The following debate occurred in the Senate of Pennsylvania a few days ago. We clip it from the Legislative Journal:

Mr. Wallace called up Senate bill No. 1096, entitled Joint resolution instructing our Senators and requesting our Representatives in Congress to introduce and vote for a bill to prevent the introduction of Chinese laborers into the United States.

Mr. Davis (Berks)—I would suggest to the Senator from Beaver [Mr. Rutan] whether he has well considered this matter, for the time may come when he will want to give the Chinese the right to vote.

Mr. M'Kinley. I hope that the Senate will not pass a resolution of this magnitude until some good and sufficient reason is given for its passage. It occurs to me that the Senate should have more self-respect. Congress has adjourned, and I don't know exactly what Congress the resolution proposes to instruct.

Mr. Chalfant. These men are taken from China by parties and brought here the same as negroes from Africa. That is what we want to get rid of; it is not to prevent them coming here of their own volition.

Mr. M'Kinley. Will the gentleman allow himself to be interrogated? Is this a political question?

Mr. Chalfant. It would hardly come under that head.

Mr. Cutler. Mr. Speaker, I do not see any reason for the passage of any such bill. I do not know why we should pass laws to prevent Chinese from emigrating to this nation more than any other people. They are certainly superior to some races, and why we should single out the Chinese and ask Congress to prevent them from coming to this country, I cannot see. It occurs to me to be absurd upon the face of it. I could name a great many races of men that I consider far inferior to the Chinese; they have the most ancient civilization of any people on the globe. I would rather they would come here than many that are already in this country, and who will probably emigrate here.

If the object of the gentleman is to prevent the slave trade, we have laws for that already; if he wants anything more stringent, let him introduce a bill for that purpose. This bill does not propose any such thing.

Mr. Davis (Berks). Will the Senator from Erie [Mr. Cutler] allow me to suggest what, in my opinion, is a valid reason for voting for this bill. The Chinese, it is well known, are filling up every place where there is work, in large numbers, we being a Christian people, they might corrupt us.

Mr. Rutan. Mr. Speaker, as I introduced this resolution it is proper for me to say I did so in obedience to the request of fifteen hundred petitioners, citizens of Beaver county. This Chinese question is a living issue in that county. The Beaver Falls cutlery company have employed about two hundred Chinese laborers who are now at work in the borough of Beaver Falls, in my county, and I am informed it is proposed to import an additional hundred.

The cutlery company formerly employed about three hundred American and English workmen, many of whom settled in that borough and bought property there because of this employment. These workmen allege that they have been driven out or are about to be before their property is paid for by reason of this importation of Chinese laborers, and they will not only be thrown out of employment, but will lose their savings of years of experience. I don't know how this is, but I give their statements and the reasons urged by the petitioners in favor of this resolution and the interference of Congress. The memorialists, who are the best citizens of our county, and the reason given for the introduction of these laborers is that it is impossible to continue the manufactory of cutlery at that place unless they are permitted to employ cheaper labor. There has recently been an effort to compromise this difficulty, which I trust may be done to the satisfaction of all parties. I cannot disguise the fact, however, that there is a strong feeling against the company for their action in this matter, but I shall not undertake now to say whether this is just or whether it is only a selfish prejudice, as some suggest. To my mind the principal objection to Chinese labor grows out of the fact that it is a species of slavery, if the statements made are correct. These men are brought under a contract for a specified period, during which time they are at the disposal of a master. This contract, I am informed, is binding after their return to China, and can be enforced there. The contractor, during the period of the contract, exercises the authority of a master and controls the two or three hundred men as slaves were once controlled in the South.

They get twenty-five dollars per month, I am informed, where our workmen got eighty—and of course competition is out of the question.

Then, again, they come here not as other foreigners do, to become citizens—but for a term of service, with the express condition that they shall return to their own country. This is a strong reason why Congress should interfere. While all who desire to come to our shores are welcome, we cannot open our doors for the importation of laborers who intend to turn our workmen out of their places for a time, and carry our gold to China in the end. We have a protective tariff, to enable our manufacturers to compete with the pauper labor of Europe, and while that continues is it not right to prevent the importation of pauper laborers here unless we can meet pauper prices? That is the question our workingmen are asking.

Mr. Wallace. Mr. Speaker, the great difference between this race and all other races, and the reason why we should not permit them to come among us and take control of the labor of our country is, that they do not come here to make themselves of us, they come here and earn money and return to their own country; they are among us, but not of us. They do not bring their families with them to make this their abiding place; they do not come here to help increase our population and nourish our institutions. That is the reason why I am opposed to their introduction here to interfere with the habits of those people who come among us to reside permanently. I think the bill ought to be passed.

Mr. M'Kinley. Mr. Speaker, now seriously the idea of Senators—men who believe in the inspired will of God as embraced in the old and new testament, who believe that God made of one blood all nations who dwell upon the face of the earth, who believe that Adam was the federal head and representative of the entire race—

Mr. M'Clure. Ain't that too far back?

Mr. M'Kinley. I hope the Senator from Philadelphia will keep his seat in order.

The Speaker. The Senator from Philadelphia will keep himself in order.

Mr. M'Kinley. The idea of offering a resolution to exclude men from coming and settling among us, when it has been the proud boast of America for almost a hundred years that this is the land of the free and the home of the brave; that we offer here upon our shores an asylum for the down-trodden and oppressed of every nation, kindred, tongue and people. And yet here is a resolution asking Congress to prevent these Chinese from coming here and settling among us. Gentlemen, I am sorry to see the Senator from Clearfield [Mr. Wallace] says they do not come here for the purpose of making it their home.

I would point the Senator to the State of California that has now within its borders one hundred thousand Chinese. Many of them have embraced the Christian religion—many of them are as good citizens as are to be found in California—and I doubt to-day whether the Pacific railroad would have been built had it not been for the Chinese labor employed in its construction.

Now it is said by a Senator on the left, that they are brought here by contract. I would remind him that hundreds and thousands of our pioneers were brought here from the Old World by contract; they came here and engaged to work out their passage after they came. I would like to know the difference between hiring a man for seven years or five years, as the case may be, to come here and work. I would like to know why we have not just as good a right to go to China and hire a hundred men to come here and work for five years if we pay them for it, as we have to go to the State of Virginia and hire colored men to go to Ohio and put them into the coal mines, as they have been doing. I would like to know whether we have not a right to go anywhere in this broad world and hire laborers to come here and do our labor. House servants are brought to my own county to do our domestic work, and their passages are paid, which they agree, before leaving their native country, to refund, and their conditions are bettered by these arrangements, and many of them make our most worthy and trusty servants, and are a class of citizens that are greatly needed.

How does the Senator from Clearfield know that these Chinese will not become citizens.

I have a very strong impression on my mind that the Senators on the other side of the house are afraid that these Chinamen will be brought here and enfranchised, and then may vote the Republican ticket. I hope Senators will not be needlessly alarmed; they have just as good a chance to send missionaries among them and convert them to their faith as we have to make Republicans of them.

I hope gentlemen will not vote for this resolution and shut the Chinamen out any other nationality out of this blessed land of freedom. Let them come here. God welcome them! There is another point in this thing. We are a Christian people; we are sending missionaries to China, to preach the Christian religion. Now I would ask Senators on this floor, if the Christian religion is worth being sent to the heathens, is it not better to Christianize the Chinamen that are here and send them back as missionaries to their native land? Answer them to the Christian religion, and teach them the civilization of the nineteenth century, of which we are so justly proud?

Mr. Peterman. I think the gentleman addressed by the Senator who has just taken his seat, was worthy of consideration. I am sorry to see a resolution of this kind introduced and pressed. I do not propose to debate the question, but to enter my protest against it.

Mr. Rutan. I desire to amend the resolution by adding at the end of it the words "under contract for service."

This is not to prevent them coming here, but the bringing them here under contract for service.

The amendment was agreed to.

On the question, Shall the bill pass?

The yeas and nays were taken, as moved by Messrs. Rutan and Mr. Fitch, and were as follow, viz:

Yeas—Messrs. Chalfant, Collins, Crawford, Davis (Berks), Graham, Humphreys, Knight, M'Clure, M'Sherry, Negley, Penrose, Pinyard, Randall, Rutan, Wallace, Weakley, and Anderson, Speaker—17.

Nays—Messrs. Cutler, Delamater, Fitch, Heilman, Mealey, M'Kinley, Wakefield and Wherry—8.

So the question was determined in the affirmative.

The following is the resolution as passed:

Resolved, By the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, that our Senators in Congress be instructed, and our Representatives be requested to introduce and vote for a bill to prevent the further introduction of Chinese laborers into the United States under contract for service.

MR. EDITOR:—In common with many citizens of our county I would like to have a little more light on the change of venue in the cases of Sims and Proudlock, indicted in the Sessions of our county. The law has entrusted this power to the Legislature to be used only when public justice demands it; now I would like our Senator,—Rutan,—and our Representative,—Cross,—to tell us on whose petition and for what reasons said act was passed. I have inquired of Messrs. Wilson and Wickham, counsel for the defendants, and they disclaim any knowledge of the matter until the certified copy of the act was placed in their hands on Saturday before court. Let us hear from you gentlemen,—your constituents demand an explanation.

Public School Exhibition.—At the close of the public school a few days ago, in Sharon, the last term of which was taught by Mr. A. E. Evans, the pupils gave an exhibition of so interesting a character that the citizens have asked for its repetition. In accordance with this request, and Mr. Evans having been prevailed upon to stay, Tuesday evening, April 8th has been selected as the time, and the Sharon school house as the place for the second entertainment. The performance will consist in part of a repetition of the previous entertainment, but in the main, the dialogues, declamations and select readings will be different from those repeated before. A small fee will be taken at the door, which will be used in the purchase of a bell for the use of the school house. It is to be hoped that the citizens of the district will all turn out and give the little folks a good house on the occasion referred to.

EDITOR ARGUS:—I noticed in the ARGUS of the 19th, a report of the election of officers and managers of the Agricultural Society for the present year. I am very well satisfied with the persons chosen, and think, in some respects, we have an improvement on last year; but why has not a financial exhibit of last year's operations been published? We are all interested in knowing how the "machine is running," and unless we see the "dots," we are quite in the dark on that subject. Won't those whose duty it is, see that the people are furnished with a statement of the receipts and expenditures of last year? I am not alone in asking for this mere act of justice.

Yours Truly, D.

In Every quarter of the Globe where it is known, and there are few indeed where it is not, the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT takes precedence of all similar preparations. Its transcendent merits have obtained a popularity seldom reached by any proprietary medicine. In its infancy the fiat of its success was pronounced in the wide-spread endorsement which it received from physicians, veterinary surgeons, horsemen and the public generally. No one now thinks of questioning its claim to be considered the Standard Liniment of America.

Two young bloods of Susquehanna Depot, Wayne county, aged nineteen years, named Frank Brue and Michael Drooney, had an altercation Tuesday afternoon of last week, which terminated in murder. The local papers give the following particulars: Brue is a wiper in the Erie engine house, and Drooney is a tailor. Both have been trying to keep the company of a young lady of the place, Drooney got the better of Brue, and while the former was walking out with his lady love on Sunday night, Brue used insulting language to his rival. Tuesday afternoon Drooney walked into the round house, met Brue and had some words with him. As he left Brue caught up a bottle that was filled with oxalic acid, which they use in scouring engines, and started after Drooney. Just as he got to him Drooney partially turned around, and as he turned Brue struck him with the bottle on the left temple and across the left cheek, cutting a deep gash in his face and smashing in his forehead. The acid ran into the wound, as the bottle was broken into a thousand pieces. He was taken home and died of his injuries shortly after. Brue left town, but is is reported that he has since been captured.

Hotel-Keepers' Manual.—Mrs. Catharine E. Beecher and Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe have published a work entitled the house-keepers manual. It is devoted to the principles of domestic science, and purports to be a guide to economical, healthful, beautiful and Christian homes. The book is well bound, neatly got up and the agent, Master Franklin Cooper of Sharon, this county, is now canvassing for subscribers in this locality.

Soldiers' Union.—At a recent meeting of the committee appointed to make preparation for effecting a permanent Soldiers' Union, to perpetuate the pleasant memories of the camp, the field and the bivouac, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That a banquet be given at New Brighton on the anniversary of Lee's surrender, April 9th, inst. and that all honorably discharged soldiers in the county, be invited to attend, and that we propose to participate, be requested to give immediate notice of their intention to the society, either in person or by letter. At a regular meeting of Amaranth Lodge, No. 294, I. O. O. F. held March 26th 1873, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God in his inscrutable Providence to remove from among us our lamented brother, Thomas P. Reed, therefore

Resolved, That in Amaranth Lodge has lost a worthy and consistent member possessing the confidence and commanding the esteem of all those associated with him in the cause of temperance.

Resolved, That while we deeply deplore his loss, we recognize the hand of God in this our affliction.

Resolved, That we tender our expression of deep condolence to the bereaved family, and that we wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days and that we drape our charter for the same time.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of deceased and also published in the county papers.

NEW BRIGHTON, March 31, 1873.

Editor of The Beaver Argus:

DEAR SIR:—My attention has been called to two articles one in the Radical signed J. A. Russell, the other in the Press, signed O. Moulter. These two gentlemen take exceptions to language made use of in my article in the ARGUS of the 19th inst., in relation to the last anti-Coolie meeting held at Concert Hall, in Beaver Falls on the 11 inst. The most objectional part is as follows:

"A committee of five to prepare resolutions were appointed, including C. A. Russell, Chairman, C. Moulter and others I have forgotten. Why I remember the two mentioned, is because I think citizens of Beaver Falls who fail to see where and by whom this excitement is kept up, are slow of comprehension. I think I know the 'Hand-writing on the wall.'"

Now, gentlemen, as there is such a striking resemblance in your articles, the train of thought, very remarkable indeed, seems to run in the same current; both arriving at the same object. I will endeavor to answer you in this article. My greatest error—according to these gentlemen—is that I intimated the idea that the resolutions passed at the meeting in question, were not the production of the committee of which Mr. R. was Chairman and Mr. M. a member. I was foolish enough to think those resolutions were written before the meeting assembled. Allow me to say why I thought so.

When a motion was adopted to appoint a Committee on Resolutions, before the President had time to think up a committee, that "greatest martyr of them all," the worthy secretary, proceeded to announce the names, and the absence of that committee was so short, I did not have time enough to eat the half-dozen pea nuts the friend at my elbow handed me. And one of the same committee, an honest German, said, "Party d—m quick you make dose resoluskina, chenteimen." Mr. Moulter says he was not one of the original intended (or set up), but was "substituted to fill a vacancy by unanimous vote of the assembly." He is popular, had a "unanimous vote," he don't claim to be father of the resolutions. In fact, Mr. R., I do not think any one blames your committee for being the author of these resolutions; and when I refer to the "hand-writing on the wall," I do not have reference to the Heathen King; but it is just as plain to my mind, as to where and by whom those resolutions were written, as the "hand-writing" referred to, was to the one who interpreted its meaning to the Heathen King. "Luced, isn't it."

Mr. M. blames me with "playing critic upon a decrepid old man." Now, Mr. M., this is very unfair, as the gentleman refered to, I am informed, is one of your best citizens, a very worthy old gentleman, just as capable of making a speech or introducing resolutions as any one in the Hall. I think you should make a public apology in justice to this inspired old man; no matter if he be a "spiritualist," he may have been prompted to attend that meeting and make a speech, and offer a few more resolutions; and I claim he is entitled to his religious belief, and if I am deceived about his resolutions being unanimously passed, then the three Pittsburgh reporters and audience were also deceived. "The sin of falsehood" is not at all applicable. As to friend Moulter's position on the Coolie question, what he has done, or may do, matters but little to me. He may succeed as well as the toad that undertook to swell himself as big as an ox, but that poor toad busted. He says, "I am now, and always have been anti-Coolie." I suppose he is, I never said he was a Chinaman. He further says, "I form my own opinions upon this, and every other question on which I am called to act; and nobody does my thinking for me, if the ARGUS correspondent wishes he may class me one of the agitators." "Lucid, isn't it." Pitch in! you can be an agitator or alligator just as you wish, although I think agitation savors strongly of conspiracy, and Mr. R. should be fully cognizant as to how much "ambiguity" there is in my expression, that no one blames your committee for being the author of these resolutions, I consider there is no nom-de-plume act in making the assertion. I think the "Gurilla" mode of warfare is applicable to yourselves—to allow others to keep themselves "behind stumps" to make the balls fly for your shooting. If there should still remain any "ambiguity" about it, I think a large number of your own citizens can make it clear enough for the dullest comprehension. Now, gentlemen, I must close, it was a hard article for me to write as you have made use of so many hard words. So far as you confined yourselves to English, I could get along by borrowing my neighbor's dictionary; but when you used French, then you upset me until I found a music teacher, who told me the meaning of your word. I am obliged to you gentlemen, for using the same word (nom-de-plume) in both your articles. No doubt you did so to save me trouble, yet it is singular at times how near two persons may think alike. In conclusion, I must say, as I don't know French, I am ashamed to sign my name, and hope you will be satisfied with X. Y. Z.

M. E. Conference.—Our town has not for years, if ever, hand so many clergymen in it at one time as it has now, and from what we saw of them, as a class, they were passably good looking; some very handsome and looked like ourself, while others were more care-worn and sallky; old veterans in the good cause. Without joking, we have not had the pleasure of ever seeing so large a number of earnest and intelligent men, and we congratulate the M. E. Church on having as fine, courteous, intelligent, and gentlemanly appearing set of clergymen, as any Church in the United States. So large a number of earnest religious workers in the cause of Christianity, scattered all over our country as they will be in a few days, must be productive of great good, and assist largely in hastening that day "when the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea."

There was also during the sessions, some of the finest vocal music we ever heard. And Mrs. Fry's lecture, as well as two accredited missionaries from India, who lectured during the evenings, we invited to attend, and that all who propose to participate, be requested to give immediate notice of their intention to the society, either in person or by letter. Important Announcement.—*S. & J. Snellenburg, the Beaver county clothiers.

In our strole up Broatway, New Brighton, the other day, we made a short call with this firm at their Clothing Emporium, and were astonished at the huge piles of spring goods of every variety and style. Suits for men and boys to please the fancy of the most fastidious as well as of the most fastidious. The county on either side being literally covered as much as a foot or more in depth with coats, pants and shirts of every conceivable make and style of well selected materials exhibiting a business tact, and a sagacity that the senior member of the firm, Mr. S. Snellenburg is known to possess in the purchase of such goods as cannot fail to please a discriminating public. This firm has also a large new, stock of Reseys Meltons, Cravats, Cassimeres, and cloths and will make up suits to order on short notice at reasonable prices. Their stock of gents furnishing goods, hats, caps, umbrellas, trunks, valises, &c, &c; is also large and attractive. Resolution of respect adopted by Amaranth Lodge, No. 294, I. O. of G. T, of Rochester, Pa.

WHEREAS, God the Almighty Governor and Ruler of all things, has seen fit to remove from our midst our beloved Brother, Dwight Coe, therefore be it resolved:

1st. That in the death of our beloved Brother, we have sustained a loss which we deeply feel; one who had here an irreproachable character, and whose genuine temperance principals and Christian graces, won for him the respect and esteem of all who knew him, and engendered his example worthy of imitation.

2d. That while we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the parents and friends of our departed brother, we can also rejoice in the right to reflect that he has gone to dwell forever with his Father in Heaven.

3d. Resolved, That our charter be draped in mourning, and that the members wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.

4th. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the parents of our deceased Brother, and to the county papers with request that they be published.

SHARON, March 24 1873.

EDITOR ARGUS:—On last Friday, with about thirty other persons, I had the pleasure of witnessing the closing exercises of the Sharon public school. These exercises consisted of an examination in the different branches taught in the school; and, which plainly manifested the care and anxiety of the teacher, Mr. A. E. Evans, for the advancement and well being of his pupils; the examination was conducted without the aid of the text book, and with questions promptly answered. In Geography, the use of the outline maps, which decorated the walls of the school room, and the singing of capitols added much to the interest. Rewards for the most punctual attendance at school; for the highest percentage in classes; and, cards as tokens of teacher's well wishes were distributed, each pupil being the recipient of something. After the orderly and agreeable ending of all these, and, the interesting addresses of Messrs. Matson Darrah, James Moffit, Joseph Beaner, directors and others, Mr. Evans closed the exercises with a telling valedictory.

INDEPENDENCE, March 27, 1873.

EDITOR ARGUS:—That you and your readers may know something more about Independence, and surrounding vicinity. I set me down to write.

The election is over. The talk about Local Option is ended, and the people have again turned their att their blue lines, she closed her eyes for a few moments; Rolin rang for a servant, who entered just as Anne hooked up again, "Hannah, I want my father," she said in so earnest, so altered a tone that the poor girl, who had always been so deeply attached to her mistress, started back clasping her hands together in an ecstacy of bewildered delight. The foolish creature recovering from her surprise, pressed up to the side of the bed with a profusion of wild, joyous ejaculations, which only added to real confusion of Anne, who was unable to comprehend the meaning of all the circumstances by which she was surrounded.

Rolin forced the half insane girl from the room, and in a moment after Mr. Wilmer was heard hurrying along the passages. As he entered, the busy memory of Anne, whose returning reason slowly assuming its influence reverted back to the last scene of her conscious existence. She remembered the withering curse of her father which had fallen like a searing flame upon her young bosom, scorching and maddening its shrinking sensibilities. She felt the weight of his iron frown which seemed to contract her heartstrings—and heard the deep tones of his voice that rang the everlasting knell of her hopes and her happiness.

"Oh! save me, save me, Rolin from that awful curse," she exclaimed in an agony of terror, clinging to her husband—and the little flame which had just began to glimmer was nearly extinguished again forever.

"My dear, dear child!" said the old man, trembling in every sinew, as he folded his arms around the neck of his shrinking daughter; "My dear, dear child! your father does not—will not curse you!—Anne, my child! do not shrink away from your father—he will go down to the grave broken-hearted, if you do not look up and smile upon him.

"Father," said she, in a deep whisper, which was heard in every corner of the apartment, and without unclosing her eyes, "will you then forgive me for disobedience?—will you love me as you used to love me? Do not curse me!" and her slender form quivered in the arms of her husband.

"Forgive you?—forgive you?" exclaimed the old man, the tears streaming down his furrowed cheeks, "Oh yes! my dear child; and love you more than I have ever loved you."

"Will you love Rolin?" she again urged, looking up into her father's face with a kind of joyful imploring confidence—"Will you love Rolin, father?

"Love him?" ejaculated the old man, gathering both in his arms like a precious treasure, "Yes! yes! my daughter—he is worthy of your love, and he is more than worthy of mine—I will love him—I will love you, and death only shall quench the flame of affection!"

At this strong assurance Anne closed her eyes, and laid her head down upon the bosom of her husband, whose heart beat with a bounding wildness which threatened to rend every fibre of existence.

CHAPTER VI.

Strung for years as tensely as their slender strength would bear, Rolin's heart-strings had drawn too heavily upon the vital functions, and now that relaxation came, came also a fearful reaction, and it was too evident to all that the term of his continuance upon earth could be of but short duration.

Anne had recovered her reason in its full vigor, but never became aware now fearful and afflicting had been the mental aberration under which she had labored for years. Whether she had any suspicion of it none knew, for she never, even the most remotely, made allusion to it, and no one, of course, hinted to her so painful and dangerous a subject. A confusion of dates at first perplexed her, but she did not seem to observe it long, and made but slight reference to it even in the early period of her recovery.

Slowly, but alas! too surely, did existence wear to its ultimate termination with the unfortunate hero of our short story. He had for long and weary years borne up against the stern sorrows of life, and now, when the clouds had broke away, and a calm, clear sky was spreading its soft blue curtains over his head, the warning voice of mortality came and whispered its chilly summons, "you must die."

Though to himself and almost every one it was evident that he must soon utter his last prayer and breathe his last sigh, yet Anne could not, dared not, think of or imagine the fearful truth. It was like a fire in her brain, and to contemplate it was to risk the domination of reason. And yet she could not rid her feelings of a weight of sadness whenever she looked intently upon the sunken eye, and pale and hollow cheek of her husband. Yet the fearful truth came at last with all of its burden of untold—unutterable misery. It came like an irresistible deluge sweeping away all resistance, and it bore the feeble victim, against whom its shock fell, to her long—long repose.

"Let us walk, Rolin," said she to him on a quiet evening in June, "the cool breezes will revive you after your day of mental toil. Come put up your books," she continued, chidingly, "you seem more attached to them than to your wife, and I am sure they cannot return half the affection she does,"—and she placed her fair soft hand upon his broad temples, and laid her warm cheek against his as she bent over his chair.

He looked up with a sad affectionate smile, for he knew that a parting must soon come, and he did not desire to, nay felt that he could not, part with the lovely being to whom his heart had been knit, even in her hours of weakness and imbecility.

He drew her arm within his as he arose at her gentle urgings, and they wandered away to the old haunts of their earlier days. The almost breathless stillness which reigns upon a summer evening when the sun has heard its place of repose in the purple west, was setting over the bosom of nature, when Rolin and his good companion returned from their pleasant wanderings. The absorbing influence of the hour lent its magic witchery to the feelings, and their spirits caught a tinge of vague yearnings which cannot belong to earth.

"Though we are bound, Rolin, in a cord of affection which would seem to circle every emotion of happiness," spoke out, almost unconsciously, his lovely wife, for she scarce thought of what she said, "yet after all, what does life bring that satisfies the appetite of the mind? Restlessness and a reaching out after an undefined, undefinable something characterizes every feature of our history; and such an hour as this but adds doubly to the yearning sensation.

"It is, my love, the immortality of our natures speaking within us. The struggles of the caged bird to escape from its lower prison. The faint glimpses and remembrances of the home from which we have been long exiled wanderers. We shall soon return thither, and though one of us may be left a little while longer than the other, yet we shall meet again to know no sorrow, no dissatisfied feelings, no parting."

He spoke so earnestly, yet with a tone so subdued and tender, that Anne looked into his face enquiringly, and after a thoughtful moment said, while a tear stole to her eyelash:

"May it be long—long ere we are called to such a parting!"

"It may be very soon, my love. We should feel a patient willingness to meet such a moment, for it will certainly find us, and will not be less painful in its consummation whether its severing come in the next hour or whether it be delayed until years shall have measured out their lengthened existence. To part, under any circumstances, must be full of bitterness, but you know that

"To bear is to conquer our fate."

There was a deep energy in his tones which Anne had not often marked, and she felt that his warnings were prophetic. For the first time in her life she bent her mind seriously to ponder upon the awful realities of a final separation, but her sickening heart turned away from the chilling contemplation.

From that evening Rolin gradually sunk away to the vale of shadows, where the weary are forever at rest.

I will not pretend to picture the agony of mind which settled upon the heart of Anne while she watched his slow progress to dissolution, but shall hasten to the last scene.

CHAPTER VII.

All day long Rolin had lain in a state of nearly total insensibility, and the night was beginning to draw toward the morning watch, when the death agony came upon him. Bathed in tears, Anne had sat for hours with her head leaning upon the same pillow that supported his, unable to look even then the awful truth of her condition full in the face, but when she saw death settling over his pale brow, and the clammy sweat standing in large drops upon his forehead, the wild and withering reality came like a blighting sirocco over the verdure of heart. She stood by him, fearfully calm, while he writhed in his last mortal struggling; but death was as busy with her heartstrings as with his, for when his snapped beneath the touch of the stern destroyer, her's thrilled to their last sad music.

The same green mound that rises above the lowly resting place of Rolin, covers all that remains of Anne his wife, and near by sleeps in unbroken solitude, the bones of him whose soon followed his hapless daughter in sorrow to the grave.

Thus is their strange history wound up. And it would seem almost an illustration of Burn's sceptical line—

"That man was made to mourn," did we dot instantly recur to his own eloquent refutation,—

"Many and sharp the mournful ills
Interwoven with our frame!
More pointed still we make ourselves
Regret, remorse and shame!
And man, whose heaven-erected face
The smiles of love adorn,
Man's inhumanity to man
Makes countless thousands mourn!"

A Highly Cultivated and Very Intelligent Audience.

A correspondence of the Cincinnati Commercial, who attended a Lydia Thompson performance, speaks of the intelligent public in the following animated style:

After a time the curtain rises again on this excessively entertaining and refined play. A gawky chap in a blue cotton overall wiggles his little toe. Inteligent audience just doubles over and holds its stomach with laughter. Gawky chap does it again. Intelligent audience laughs harder than ever. Ugly old heathen stumbles against gawky chap in blue overall, and whops over upon the floor, and assures folks that that's the kind of man he is. Inteligent audience, delirious with mirth, doubles ouer and holds its stomach with laughter again. Another young woman in spangled clothes appears, and gives a kick, and says: "You bet." Highly cultivated audience laughs immoderately and claps very hard. Young woman slaps dirty old loafer in the face and then spats her hands together. Audience claps and fairly splits its sides with mirth. Young woman gives a hideous screech. Intelligent audience laughs till tears run down its cheek. It whistles the young woman back. She lays her lily-white hand across her lungs and bows sweetly, and she and the other pretty young ladies in spangled garments chant altogether a fearful and wonderful ditty, of which you cannot understand anything except the chorus, which says something like this:

And sing and dance,
I yip, I yow.
And sing and dance,
I yip, I yow.

Intelligent audience goes into convulsions. Then some more despicable crackling, comic singing. The very climax of hysterical mirth is reached for that intellectual audience when half a dozen of the female women, the ugly old heathen and the gawky chap in the blue apron, all stands in a row and sing a wild, thrilling air, which says at the end of every verse: "How's that for high!" And just as they say, how's that for high, they all give a very high kick indeed, as though they were exceedingly anxious to kick somebody up stairs. It doesn't look pretty to see a lady kick. But the intelligent audience is in a frantic frenzy of delight, and hee-haws and howls with rapture. Scene closes in a dissolving view of the gawky, he then winking his left ear, and I can't find words in the dictionary any more to describe the beautiful state of tickle of the audience. I haven't been afforded such exciting and encouraging views of human nature in six weeks. Such refined and classic taste, you know, and such a delicate showing up and shading off of the many emotions which play upon the human soul.

A Character.

Old Judge W., of——, in the Old Dominion, is a character. He was a lawyer, legislator, Judge and leading politician among the old time Whigs of blessed memory; but, alas! like them, his glory departed, and, like many others of his conferees, has gone "where the woodbine twineth." Notwithstanding the loss of property and the too free use of applejack, he maintained the dignity of ex-Judge, dressed neatly, carried a goldheaded cane, and when he had taken more than his usual allowance of the favorite beverage, he was very pious at such times, always attending church, and sitting near the stand as erectly as circumstances would admit, and responding fervently. On one occasion a Baptist brother was holding forth with energy and unction on the evil of the times, and in one of his flights he exclaimed, "Show me a drunkard!" The Judge rose to his feet, and, unsteadily balancing himself on his cane, said solemnly, "Here I am, sir; here I am." The elder, though a good deal non-plussed by the unexpected response, managed to go on with his discourse, and, soon warming up to his work, again called out, "Show me a hypocrite! Show me a hypocrite!" Judge W. again rose, and reaching forward across a seat which intervened, touched Deacon D. on the shoulder with his cane, and said, "Why don't you respond? I did when they called on me."

Wanted the Knot Untied.

A strange wedding is recorded as having taken place in Pottersville, N. J., recently, the bride being a miss of only fifteen summers, while the bridegroom is an old man sixty-five years old. The girl's name was Catharine Hegeman, and is the daughter of a respectable farmer, who is reputed to be well-off. Ashbury Farley, the hero of the tale, is described as a strong, powerfully built man, who was sent by his friends to the State Lunatic Asylum some years ago, but who was subsequently released, being considered harmless. Recently he took it into his head that he needed a wife, and he set about supplying the want. He offered himself to several young ladies in Pottersville, but was rejected by all of them, although he possessed considerable property and $11,000 in money. At length he became acquainted with the Hegeman's, and arrangements were made that Farley should marry Catharine, on condition of his settling $10,000 and giving her a pony phaeton. A pastor was engaged to perform the ceremony, and the marriage was consummated. No sooner had the ceremony been performed than Catharine became frightened. She turned to the minister and demanded that he should untie the marriage knot. He told her that the step she had taken was irrevocable. Farley tried to console his wife, but she put him from her, and refused to look at him. She declared she would never live with him, and the result was, Farley went back to his farm and Catharine remained with her father. The affair is yet a mystery to the friends of the young girl, s family, but it is believed that the parents of the girl deliberately sold their child for money.

THE GALLOWS.

Two Murderers Hanged—William Foster and James McElhaney.

WILLIAM FOSTER.

NEW YORK, March 21, 1873.

The execution of Foster took place at seventeen minutes past nine o'clock this morning in the Tombs. There were hundreds waiting outside the Tombs this morning, hoping to be able to witness Foster's execution. The crowds were kept back by the police, and not one in twenty of those outside, however, was admitted. The prisoner in the morning was very faint. He partook of some coffee, but ate nothing. Rev. Drs. Tyng and Schoonmaker attended him. He engaged in devotional exercises until a few minutes before his execution.

At twelve minutes past nine o'clock he left his cell on his march to the scaffold. As he entered the yard Foster gave one quick, startled glance around, but instantly recovered himself and walked with a tolerably firm step to the gallows. He was attended by Sheriff Brenan and Under-Sheriff Stevens, and was closely followed by Rev. Dr. Tyng and Rev. Mr. Schoonmaker, the former of whom preached as he walked. On reaching the gallows, Foster, of his own accord, placed himself beneath the noose. His face looked very pale beneathe the black cap, and grew paler every moment. As Dr. Tyng prayed he bowed his head and covered his face, with his right hand. For six minutes Dr. Tyng continued his prayer, and it was evident that Foster was at the point of swooning. The Sheriff quietly signed to Dr. Tyng to finish as quickly as possible, and advancing, shook Foster by the hand. Dr. Tyng then bade him farewell, and at 9:18 a. m. the signal was given, and Foster was jerked violently into the air.

Foster was a heavy man, and for once the neck was broken, and the spectators were spared the terrible spectacle of a man writhing in the throes of strangulation. The heart ceased to bent in rather less than twelve minutes from the time the weight fell, and in all probability Foster died without a pang.

This afternoon Foster's body was removed from the Tombs to the residence of his widow.

JAMES M'E LHANEY.

BOSTON, March 21.—James McElhaney, who murdered his wife, was executed at Suffolk jail at twelve minutes past eleven o'clock this morning. There were about four hundred spectators present. The prisoner walked firmly to the scaffold. He left six thousand dollars' worth of property to his child.

It is stated on the authority of McElhaney's spiritual advisers that members of his wife's family refused to allow him to see his child Nellie Emma, aged two years. A letter seconding an often-expressed wish on the part of the condemned man to see his child was sent by Sheriff Clark to the family, but without effect.

ABORIGINAL HUMOR.

An American Comedy.

MODOC.

Scene I.

Mail route on the Plains. Capt. Jack and his band of redskins discovered upsetting a mail coach and scalping the passengers.

Captain Jack (wiping the blood off his face)—Ugh! Red man like peace. Great father at Washington big chief. Red man have white heart. Love all his brothers. Too much blood. Indians sick of blood.

One-Eyed Scalawag (running a knife through a child)—Red men brothers, but great father has not sent them rifles enough. Our hearts are cold with bad whisky, but there is no lie in them. Indians love peace.

Scene II.

An Indian encampment at night. Indians discovered, with their squaws, sleeping. Frontiersmen and soldiers seen shooting them from the timber.

Yellow Stone Jack, a trapper (bringing down a squaw with his rifle)—There ain't no reason in the world why this here continent ain't big enough for Indians and white men too. All these things can be settled by a pow-wow without shedden' blood.

Hairy Jim (braining a papoose)—There ain't but one way to fix it; that's to have a new Peace Commission. There ain't been any this month. That's what's the matter.

Lieutenant in charge (issuing orders to burn up the lodges and the remainder of the children)—That's true, men. I'm sick of this work. After we have killed the rest of the women and children, I shall insist on a talk. These savages must be made to understand that a powerful government is not actuated by feelings of revenge.

Scene III.

Grand pow-wow on the Plains

Captain Jack (with seventeen white scalps to his girdle)—Indian glad to meet white warrior. Indian never seeks white man's blood. Bad Indians drink bad whisky and kill. Captain Jack angry with bad Indians. Good Indian's heart full of love. Captain Jack cry like squaw to see white man killed.

Peace Commissioner—It cheers the heart of the white man and the great father at Washington to hear such noble words from his red children. War and bloodshed are not his desire, and he sends fresh buttons and needle-guns and revolvers and powder and scalping-knives to his children as peace offerings.

Scene IV.

Grand Tableau—Peace Commissioner seen lying stiff in a slough, with one of the great father's knives thrust into his heart, and Captain Jack and his squaws piled up in the road with their throats cut.

Grand Transformation Scene—"Let there be peace!"

—A bill for the immediate abolition of slavery in Porti Rico passed the Spanish Assembly Saturday.

—He that has energy enough to root out vice should go a little further and plant a virtue.

—The inmates of a Hoboken boarding house describes the programme of their breakfast as "bells jingled out of tune, and hash."

—A successful burglary was accomplished in Williamsport last week. The thief secured a box of paper collars and a bootjack.

—Henry Ward Beecher says that a poor man with plenty of "cheek" will get along better than a modest man with $50,000.

—The man who wrote to the State Board of Agriculture to ascertain what was the best to plant in wet land, was favorably impressed by the answer. It was "Leeks."

—What a glorious thing it would be if all women were rich. Now there is that rich Ohio woman who cheerfully pays her little $50 fine every time she feels like beating the unfortunate man she calls husband.

—A colored gentleman was struck on the head with a brick falling from the top of a five-story Buffalo building recently. He looked up to the workmen and bawled out, "Say, you fellahs up thar, ye ain't layen bricks without mortah, are ye?"

WE CLERGYMEN

of Chronic and Acute Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Sciatica, Kidney and Nervous Diseases, after years of suffering, by taking Dr. Fitler's Vegetable Rheumatic Syrup—the scientific discovery of J. P. Fitler, M. D., a regular graduate physician, with whom we are personally acquainted, who has for 30 years treated these diseases exclusively with astonishing results. We believe it our christian duty, after deliberation, to conscientiously request sufferers to use it, especially persons in moderate circumstances who cannot afford to waste time and money on worthless mixtures. As clergymen we seriously feel the deep responsibility resting on us in publicly endorsing this medicine. But our knowledge and experience of its remarkable merit fully justifies our action. Rev. C. B. Ewing, Media, Penn's, suffered sixteen years, became hopeless. Rev. Thomas Murphy, D. D., Frankford, Philadelphia. Rev. J. E. Davis, Hightstown, New Jersey. Rev. J. S. Buchanan, Clarence, Iowa. Rev. G. G. Smith, Pittsford, New York. Rev. Joseph Beggs, Falls Church, Philadelphia. Other testimonials from Senators, Governors, Judges, Congressmen, Physicians, &c., forwarded gratis with pamphlet explaining these diseases. One thousand dollars will be presented to any medicine for same diseases showing equal merit under test, or that can produce one-forth as many living cures. Any person sending by letter description of affliction will receive gratis a legally signed guarantee, naming the number of bottles to cure, agreeing to refund money upon sworn statement of its failure to cure. Afflicted invited to write to Dr. Fitler, Philad'a. His valuable advice costs nothing.
